

---

Subject: Stoned again sorry

Posted by MexPirate on Mon, 12 Mar 2007 22:46:06 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

and for todays random ramble, I was just thinking about MMO's like WoW that are supposed to have like 8 million players - many of them taking the game as seriously as life itself, lol.

What if they were to try to create a virtual country with those 8 million citizens and trade as a country, tax players and trade real money have a government etc in rl. that would be pretty crazy, they could have their own embassys accross the world for massive lan parties and important online government meetings.

They could introduce tasks in the game that are capable of generating real money including advertising etc and make the virtual currency hold value and be traded, wow being used for investments on a virtual stock market to make real money.

Umm yea it could happen... Discuss

---