

---

Subject: Iraq and the atrocities thereof.

Posted by ron paul on Fri, 04 May 2007 23:29:52 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Quote:

The moment a teenage girl was stoned to death for loving the wrong boy

A 17-year-old girl has been stoned to death in Iraq because she loved a teenage boy of the wrong religion.

As a horrifying video of the stoning went out on the Internet, the British arm of Amnesty International condemned the death of Du'a Khalil Aswad as "an abhorrent murder" and demanded that her killers be brought to justice.

Reports from Iraq said a local security force witnessed the incident, but did nothing to try to stop it. Now her boyfriend is in hiding in fear for his life.

Miss Aswad, a member of a minority Kurdish religious group called Yezidi, was condemned to death as an "honour killing" by other men in her family and hardline religious leaders because of her relationship with the Sunni Muslim boy.

The link is not works safe. So don't click on it if you're in work/school.

<http://eye-on-the-world.blogspot.com/2007/05/iraq-teenage-girl-was-stoned-to-death.html>

I find this incredibly sickening.

I decided to post this here because it's time to draw attention to more important issues rather than "troop(x) was cheating" or "stupid drama here [copycat/don imus/random stupid bitching about nothing even remotely important]"

---