Whenever you use a "s" sound, it hurts my ears... (no offense. )

I have had a speech impediment since birth due to a "tied tongue", I have a lisp on my "s". It has improved over the years, but I think the microphone makes it sound worse.

I am extremely self conscious about it, and try to cover it sometimes. But when people notice and comment on it, it makes it worse, I concentrate too hard on the impediment and I start to sound like a hissing snake.
