I work a 9-5 job, and I try to get out of the house as much as I can. That doesn't always work, so the computer is my form of entertainment. Anymore, I hate computers. I'd much rather be out doing something, but I hate being by myself.

I golf on a league on Mondays. It's basically just an excuse to drink and be perverted with a bunch of other guys. Needless to say, the money it costs to golf is well worth it.

I'm becoming more social which is a bit different of an approach to life than I've had in years past. Being anti-social is fucking stupid. I'm glad I finally grew out of it.

I've also found out that drinking is much more fun than in previous years. Beer sucks, though. I'll stick with my hard liquor.
