In open field, yes, the orca would win, but a skilled sniper can simply shoot and hide again. Then the orca is down in no time with relatively little damage to the orca. Orca's aren't invincible, you make it sound that way. And if you think that is (at least mostly) true, then shouldn't your opinion piece be about orcas instead of donating? Also, do you have any argument on nonflying maps?
