
Subject: Re: roms

Posted by PsY on Tue, 24 Jun 2003 04:44:18 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

sjezk3well least a have a site which is probably gonna be the best site for roms it has no pop ups no adds all the links actually work. anyway who doesnt like roms ?? its just for a bit of fun just something i done in my spare time, unlike you, you have to suck sites off other people like noobstories isnt even your site but you say it is cos your an admin???

ignore all the crap this guy says i honestly dont know what his obsession is with me :rolleyes:

You say you think your site is the best site for ROMS out there? Then why dont you have a domane name atleast...or a better background that doesnt lag....or look like shit...

This reminds me of when I had a website...about 5 actually...on a server I actually paid for...with money...like what you get if you have a life...

I wanted it to be a place for everyone to enjoy, no matter what you like. It had games for all age groups, music, jokes, game cheats (never got finished though). It was a pretty good site for a rookie site creator-considering I did everytihng myself and had no way to advertice other than in real life...but this was in elementary school mind you, so all the kids are like "wuts dat? a website? whuuut?"

But then, one day as I was sitting in a nice green leather recliner that came directly from ireland, using money that people with real lives have, I realized something. Noone came to my site, I got about 3-5 hits a day if I was lucky, And I had it in search engines, forums, chatrooms, all over the place.

I figured it out, my site sucked, notihng I could do about it, I just wasnt good at it.

Now this isnt all about website building here, but the main point of it. The main point is finding that something your doing is, well, just not your thing.

And this, my mentally challanged friend, for you, happens to be life. Your not good at life, your not good at thinking, socially communicating, anything to do with artistic fasion, anythingto do with other people, anything to do with anything.

Quit while your at life, your no good.
