Well another thing is, we are being like a bunch of politicians..

What about some1 who plays the game for fun, 1 day goes on and its all screwy to them, because they don't even know this forum exist so they have no say on something <hence, i was 1 of those people, but then joined a clan... I only knew what happens in RA2 because I wanted to know more about whats going on in developers minds then just playing it, unlike ren where I just enjoyed playing it.

(And I think EWD would make the best decisions, not basing them on his own benefits.)

Things shouldn't be based on democracy because that causes flame wars and useless political battles over the obvious just because some1 wants power/there voice heard over every1 else's, it should be based on what ALL the people think with a couple compromises of what you think would bring best results for the community w/out worrying about your or your clans(for say) benefits, to make every1 happy.

And voters are a major issue because most likely they will vote for who they are friends with or who sounds the most convincing, and the people who would vote for who will do the best job don't care to vote < like the US government...

What if you just brought up main issues publicly, then after you hear voice opinions, decide for yourself using what the people like...
