They could say they don't support the draft one minute, and after elected, could support it the next minute.

Saying you would go if a draft was instated doesn't make you a tool. It's doing your duty for your country. It doesn't matter if your ideals conflict with it or not.

Sure, they could support it, but then they would be hard pressed to find support next election.

That's not anywhere near what I said. I don't consider anybody a tool for not doing drugs simply because they're illegal. I was saying that saying we need to grow up and get ready for it like we shouldn't have an opinion is being a tool. I don't get the whole blindly following politicians thing.
