I'm not saying that American Football players are weak or anything but you can be pretty sure they don't take as much of a battering with those pads on. I'm pretty sure Rugby players also have a hell of a lot more endurance since from the little I know about American Football the stoppages are quite regular. I have never really seen Aussie Rules Football so I can't really comment on that one.

As I said, you have to see the actual physics of the game. Just because there's padding doesn't mean it absorbs the blows completely. I know there was some numbers in Maxim magazine, but I don't remember them.
