Everyone has said the n word, not necessarily as a direct reference to a black person, but even as a joke. If you haven't, you're either very young, or a goody-two-shoes.
So suddenly, people who don't cuss are idiots?
I did not say that.

Young kids generally tend not to swear. People who have higher morals than most people tend not to swear. (By people who have higher morals, I mean those who would not copy a friend's homework, who would never lie to their parents, who would always obey traffic laws, etc.) And even then, I've known some people who actually don't do any of those things listed who STILL swear.

Then again, some people just DON'T swear, however, personally, I find less and less of those people around every day.

But my main point I wanted to make back up a few posts ago was that saying the n word on the internet isn't really that big of a deal.
