Wow this topic is hilarious.

I think it's already been sufficiently argued though so I don't know if there's much for me to add. I pretty much agree with Cheesesoda's points. I also really liked this post by Nukelt:

I would definately act if my family were in danger, no question. I would not regret it my entire life though because in my heart I would feel justified in my actions. As someone stated earlier when people engage in certain acts: burglary, assault, rape, they forfeit their right to safety and life. I completely support personal gun ownership and if they weren't so gosh darn expensive would probably have a gun by now.
