Ok ok ok...

Middle schoolers are TOO YOUNG to have sex, or even think about sex, or even be playin with themselves. They just don't understand what's so special about it or all the consequences that can happen.

Personally, I know the first thing I'll tell my son when he's 16 is "If you're gonna do it, be safe! Cuz I'm not helpin ya out if you knock someone up."

I think at 16 kids are old enough to understand sex for the most part, and are mature enough to handle it.

On the subject of waiting till marriage, I think that's ridiculous. I know people who are goin out who love each other a lot. I think that if you REALLY love your partner, sex can be the best way to "get closer to" them. Although it can spoil some relationships, if you're mature enough to handle your desires and realize your partner isn't just a sexual object, it can be the best thing that ever happened, making a special bond between you two.

If you DO choose to wait till you're married, it just might be that much better, but I don't think it's wrong if you do it before.

Now's the point where I'd tell my own story, but I'm not entirely sure you'd wanna read it.
