That ladies and gentlemen, is the reason that our generation is so fucked up. Loose morals creates bastard children with mothers that don't even have an age spread of 18 years. Loose morals are the reason sexually transmitted diseases run rampant and loose morals are the reason for much of the crime that happens.

Limit yourself to one woman that you love(not lust mind you) and these things have less of a chance of happening. Or, as was mentioned earlier, wait until marriage.

I disagree. I believe that the morals today are the problem. Going along with what I said earlier about grandparents, morals each year get more strict and strict because of the current generation trying to be better, but not as "mean" as the previous generation.

Therefore more morals are put into play. This restricts the boundaries of everyone's life. It makes life harder, and most of these 'morals' are completely pointless and shouldn't even exist. And because some morals exist, the world is a horrible place!

Think of morals like how the ESRB rates video games. During the times of the N64, games that were rated "E" would of been rated "T" or even "M" in some cases today. (Don't ask me for any examples.. I don't feel like looking through my N64 games...)

Now, I'm not saying morals are bad... I am saying that too many morals are bad. It is like eating vegetables. If you eat them, they're good for you, but if they are all you eat, it isn't good for you.

I also realize that people have their own morals, but I just think that some of those morals are completely stupid... complicates life for little no no reason at all.

I believe in my own morals, too. What I believe in is doing whatever relates to me, and if I am able to help someone else by doing something that I was going to do anyway, then I would do that instead. I would much rather make life easier for someone else than for me, just as long as I end up doing what I wanted in the first place...

I believe this is good because it doesn't complicate life, it can only make it easier... no matter how you look at it.

wow I went off on a tangent.
