

---

Subject: Re: Why the US really wants to go to war with Iran

Posted by prasp on Fri, 26 Oct 2007 02:19:47 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Quote:<http://www.cnn.com/2007/WORLD/meast/10/25/quds.force/index.html>

That's a lie, Iran supported the coalition that toppled the Taliban in Afghanistan and told it's allies in the region to do so.

Quote:Well Bush will soon be out of office and hopefully the next person in charge will not allow this or recall it if the war was already in affect.

Not going to happen, the neo-conseratives have been pulling the strings since Ronald Reagan.

Quote:Well, the thing is we also need to know if there ever will be peace in Iraq and if the strategy will work out. While it is important to finish what has been started and make the sacrifices of many mean something, we also have to bear in mind the reality of the situation.

It's going to take at least a decade for the US to install a puppet government functionally enough to make it look like it can stand on it's own without US support.

The neo-cons could hardly care about their troops sacrifices, all they care about is building a war base in which to bully other European countries to enrich their fatass pockets, they don't care about Iraqis at all.

Quote:I look at a Soldier as being a better citizen than I. It doesn't matter if I have more education or not.

Except now there are gangs in the military.

Quote:The military in a peacetime volunteer role is a BETTER educated force than the populace at general, and quite frequently use the military to get education to move into the private sector. Not right now, the army's taking anyone they can get their hands on because they're stretched to the breaking point in Iraq.

---