

---

Subject: Re: Why the US really wants to go to war with Iran

Posted by cheesesoda on Sun, 28 Oct 2007 03:04:55 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

SSADMVR wrote on Sat, 27 October 2007 13:06 Bush is the most ignorant american president ever, and that says alot, he jus dives into a war costing the usa an incredible amount of money withoput even resolving any of the chaos in Iraq, than he just doesnt even show his fucking face when disaster hits, and last but not least he threw his country right into the middle of economical recession, yeah hes not ignorant at all.

The only way the people will ever like him again is if he gets declared as some sort of hero taking out all the terrorists, now theyre jus gonna dive into Iran like they did Iraq and come up with some bullshit showing what a great job Bush did, exactly like they planned to do during second gulfwar but eventually managed to fail at it...

THIS is my problem with European ignorance. I don't see Americans judging all of Europe's leaders. Instead, all I see is incorrect assumptions from Europeans, insulting our leaders.

Call me crazy, but slowly entering a war doesn't make sense. If we just eased our way into Iraq, it would give them a better chance to fight us. That wouldn't be smart, would it?

Since when is it a president's job to be at every "important" event that happens in America? Just because liberals like government interference, doesn't mean that conservatives do, too.

Economic recession? What the fuck are you talking about? We MAY be hitting a recession, but our economy is the best it's been in years. Yeah... he's done such a horrible job.

---