
Subject: Re: How old should kids be before they start fucking?

Posted by Sn1per74* on Mon, 05 Nov 2007 02:38:44 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

cmatt42 wrote on Sun, 04 November 2007 12:09Blazer wrote on Thu, 18 October 2007 16:40I'm really starting to think the movie "Idiocracy" is coming true.

I had the same sentiment back when I heard this.

razorblade001 wrote on Thu, 18 October 2007 21:56

I don't understand why we, as humans, feel the need to limit a life function for ourselves.

Ahem. China.

luv2pb wrote on Thu, 18 October 2007 22:18I read that article today too. They have to have their parents permission to go to the health center but under that states law they don't have to tell their parents why or what was done when they went. That is to young. Period. If a 6th grader comes looking for birth control the school should sit them down and deal with it. Not give them fucking condoms.

I concur.

Renerage wrote on Mon, 22 October 2007 12:43

Who cares, give the kid some condoms,

And let it rip.

Is that a bad joke?

Anyway, here's my take on this:

When two people consent to having intercourse, either of two things occur:

-They acknowledge the possible outcomes and have every intention of embracing them with the responsibility needed.

-They ignore everything just so they can screw.

Now, call me old-fashioned, but I believe in sex after marriage. Why? Because it's like taking specific steps in relationships in order. When two people decide to fornicate, to me that's them saying "Oh, we can handle having a kid and taking care of said kid for years to come, but we can't be assed to get married; it's too much of a commitment." That doesn't make sense to me. That's like trying to run before you can walk.

Now, if the kids really believe that they can take care of any and all offspring, hell, they should go for it. Then if they can take care of a child, why can't they move out of their parents' house, smoke cigarettes, order things off of the TV, and gamble? Well, the government says so, the reason being something to the effect of being unable to take responsibility for their actions at such a young age. But wait, they can fuck and bring new lives to the world? That's nuts.

The legal age of consent should be the legal age for everything else, 18 (or "equivalent").
This guy is a smart man! He brings up very good points why you should wait until marriage. Way to go C matt!
