I missed his point, or did you miss mine?

I misread. Sorry.

cheesesoda wrote on Wed, 07 November 2007 00:02 I don't give a fuck what "curiosity" can do to a person.

Because you don't give a fuck doesn't mean curiosity did not play a crucial role in making people reach a decision. I think personal decision is the final say but it is stupid to ignore the strong intravening forces if they are present.

cheesesoda wrote on Wed, 07 November 2007 00:02 It still doesn't take away from the fact that it's their own personal decision to bow to their curiosity.

You nicely evaded discussing about curiosity by saying "I don't give a fuck" and went right into your favorite all-time "personal decision" bullshit.

I agree completely that personal choice is the last say but in this case, curiosity can weaken the resolve of the person making the personal choice...hence making a personal decision much harder but still attainable. Curiosity played a part, no matter.

You are telling personal choice made them do this? Or was it curiosity?

NOTE: I am not presenting curiosity as an excuse to do something but as a natural human reaction that has to be dealt with before making a personal decision.
