

---

Subject: Re: i just saw the 2 girls 1 cup video
Posted by cheesesoda on Wed, 07 Nov 2007 18:33:13 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Ryan3k wrote on Wed, 07 November 2007 13:21
cheesesoda wrote on Wed, 07 November 2007 10:21
Starbuzz...uriosity is POWERFULOL...
I understand what curiosity is and what it does. There's a reason why the saying "curiosity killed the cat" exists.

Why do my arguments always funnel back to my all time favorite "personal responsibility" argument? Because regardless of how you twist it, a person is still 100% responsible for their reactions even if you claim there's some underlying force pushing someone to make that decision.

See, this is why I hate liberals... they try to excuse everything to sugarcoat it all. It's what drives Al Sharpton and Jesse Jackson to keep opening their mouths. It's what wastes billions and billions of dollars on welfare and education. Compassion is a good thing, but it becomes dangerous when you're willing to pretend that everybody is 100% good, and only their decisions are bad. Sorry, but a healthy tree doesn't bear bad fruit. Or as they say, GIGO.

Look, when I say this, I am nowhere near excluding myself. I hold myself accountable to all the stupid actions. I was fired from my previous job (regional retail chain) because I stole from them. Why did I steal from them? Because I hated my job so much, and I was a gullible guy, so when my co-worker suggested the scheme, I happily obliged. Now, we can try to excuse my actions by saying that it wasn't entirely my fault because I hated the place I worked for and I was easily sucked into it because I was gullible. I realize you admit that I still made the bad choice, but are you going to lessen the blame on me because of the "underlying reasons"? You shouldn't.

why are you being so serious in a topic dedicated to the '2 girls 1 cup' video Dunno, I went on a tirade. It happens.

---