So should cars!

k I always hear the same rhetoric from people. cars are completely different from guns. guns are designed to kill, cars are intended for transportation.

Legal intentions of a gun are for food and defense. They're not meant for offense (murder and such). Therefore, the gun and automobile comparison is pretty damn accurate.

it's not something that is designed to be lethal to another living creature human or not. The two can somewhat be compared but it's not a comparison that I see as worth much of anything.

Neither are knives, but if you stab someone with one just right, I bet you could kill them. Bottom line: People kill People. I'm going to bring up an ongoing theme in these forums: Personal Responsibility - Stop blaming guns for the crimes people commit with them.

K but most knives are made for cutting meat or vegetables n shit apart.
