I don't think anyone should be sued. I just think that Parents need to KNOW what those ESRB ratings mean.

I mean, before they became so strict. They need to loosen up... back in like the 90s where games that had the content of Goldeneye 007 where rated T, THAT made sense. But now games like that are being rated M because of the tiny bits of blood stains!

The reason why it is BAD for the ESRB to get strict with their ratings is because now nobody even listens anymore!

"Oh look, a Spongebob game!... rated M... hmmm" No one cares because it obviously ISN'T supposed to be rated that way.
