Pay very close attention to the feedback rating of the user you buy from. Make sure they have a decent history of successfully selling the same or similar item to what you want to buy. PayPal is a very safe way to conduct these transactions. If the seller never delivers, PayPal is the only way you really have a good chance of getting your money back.

I've had dozens of successful eBay transactions as a buyer and a seller. You're going to hit a random idiot who tries to take your money and run, but those can be almost completely avoided by watching the seller's feedback religiously.
