

---

Subject: Re: Election '08

Posted by Dover on Sun, 13 Jan 2008 00:24:17 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

MWright967 wrote on Sat, 12 January 2008 15:04Dover wrote on Sat, 12 January 2008 15:37Firstly, like Starbuzz pointed out, we're talking modern governments. Lets try to confine ourselves to events of the past 5 centuries? Fair enough?

Secondly:

NOWHERE NEAR EACH OTHER. I thought that as a well-traveled man you'd take a gander at a map once in a while.

I also would have thought someone like you, possessing moderately high intelligence would have known a little more about history.

I didn't say they lived right next to each other. I said they CAME FROM THE SAME PLACE. Just so you know, Germans, Nords, Swedes, Pollocks, Brits, and pretty much everyone in those upwardly cold and windy areas of the world all come from the same thing. They're all Anglo-Saxon tribes. For example, the English, Irish, Scottish, and Welsh were originally Germans that migrated over. Then the Gauls, another Tutonic tribe came over, and then the Saxons, yet another Tutonic tribe came over. There were quite a few invasions of England and the surrounding areas, actually. Point being, blood wise, they're exactly the same. Lets not forget, the Swiss were the founders of modern day Russia.

Using your logic, people can't be the same thing if they live far apart. So I suppose all of the Roman soldiers stationed for 400 years in England meant they weren't Roman anymore, right?

The last thing you want to do is get into a debate with me over Tutonic history. I took about 5 different courses on this in College.

Ugh. If you're going to bail yourself out that way, pretty much everything we're looking at on the map (And large parts of the Middle East and India) can trace their liniage back to Aryan nomads from modern day Mongolia/Southern Russia. Common liniage means shit here, since we're all human and we all "came from the same place".

And again, for the fourth time this thread. MODERN GOVERNMENTS. I'm even willing to extend this past to 500 years ago (Which isn't modern anyway)

---