oh and remember, if i really hated you guys i would posted the missionDM presets wich i have.

It is true you did a lot for Renz0r you where there longer online then most of the members, I admire that. I knew you liked it, it was fun to have you around.

I don't blackmail you or do I?

You said: oh you can have the domain back for 100 bucks.
Now you are busy with the presets?

What is next you are going to sell the server company on E-Bay?

'and yes i think you were a badtalker' Badtalker?
Well I suppose you mean backtalker.

Do you know how I felt when I heard from Reck that after each strategy game we played you did curse on me so bad that if I would stand next to you I probably died?

I want to know from you everything you told to me that I shouldn't pass on and, in these cases please note with it if you said I shouldn't discus is with Reckneya or any other staff member.

Because I think you are enlarging it.

As for more I do not think I have told Reckneya anything that he wasn't supposed to know about you.

Can you name me one situation where I did do that? Because I can't recall any situation where I did.

If I think you are right about that fact I will apologize. (or if you have prove I did)

Ok now a little logic thinking before you post that something is backtalking. If any of these cases consisted well then it surely wasn't backtalking.

You didn't post any relevant data about what I did so that argument fails. No structural arguments so they all fail.

Is the staff allowed to talk over a member who may have gone out of line?

I think so, it is just as in a company where the director talks with a employee manager. The employee themselves aren't there to discuss anything or hear anything.

Can staff members chat about a member that needs to go or needs to have a penalty because he or she did something wrong?

I think staff members should be allowed to do so because the member is on the staff's property and is allowed by the staff to be there. On this property are the rules of the staff members active. A member agrees hereby instantly when he joins.

(it is the same as when you walk into a shop, it is a rule that you can't take goods out of the selves and don't pay for it. The shop owner decided this himself; he will probably accuse you of theft)

Your arguments consist out of nothing that some loose air. Please get real arguments before you are going to say that I or someone else did something wrong. Or that someone is a backtalker or what so ever.

I will go to rethink what I have done; I suggest you do the same and next time talk about yourself. Self reflection is more important than yelling at me or someone else. If you have a good self reflection you might even fix a lot more than keep yelling that he or she is a did or that.
