Subject: Re: Should the community have a "say"?
Posted by Renx on Sun, 27 Jan 2008 03:05:10 GMT

There is far from a complete lack of moderation here. Read the rules over a couple times then come back here and try to justify that claim.

This forum is a very tricky one to moderate. It's the general discussion, in a sense, any type of discussion should be allowed to take place here so long as it doesn't directly conflict with the CoC. Whether it be an intelligent conversation about some new technology, or a IQ-lowering discussion about words that contain the letter B. Just because you don't agree with or like what someone is posting doesn't mean it's against the rules, nor does it mean it should be.

Everyone here has had all the "say" they could ever need since the Report button was added. If you don't think the moderators are getting to everything then give them a hand and stop complaining. Instead of making this thread it would have taken you less time to click the report button, and you would have gotten more accomplished. I'm sure you'd all be shocked at the amount of moderation that goes on here if you had access to The Silo, or if Crimson/Blazer posted parts of the Action Log.