Okay so i thought after some consideration, i would install the latest Scripts.dll.

So i used Renegade Tool Manager and download the latest version. Then moved the download files to the Renegade directory. It asks me if i wanna overwrite the existing files and i say Yes to All and it overwrites all existing copies.

Now i think, thats that Renegade should be better and more efficient. So i start up Renegade and then WWConfig snaps in my face. I think "WTF!? Ps off." click Ok on it and then it gives me that dumb ass windows error. "We are sorry for the inconvenience" and asks me to send an error report.

Please guys, why does it give me this error. I just don't understand it. The latest and most advanced Scripts.dll should not give me these errors. I am very annoyed!

Why does it do this. I mean whenever i go to interact with the WWConfig when it pops up it crashes like that and give me the error.

I have downloaded the version before that now and it still don't work. It does not give me any trouble with the WWConfig but wants a newer version of DIRECT3D. So im downloading the latest version from Microsofts site.
