

---

Subject: Re: Get over white people.

Posted by BlueThen on Thu, 31 Jan 2008 04:22:57 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Just going along with everything. A black guy calls me cracker, oh well. Life isn't over. I don't call black people "mean mean black persons" or anything offensive. I avoid using offensive statements in the same sentence with the word "black," or "asian," or any other possible race.

Responding to a racist remark would only make me seem racist, and show irony and only get both of us in trouble.

Sometimes things can solve themselves, in my opinion, it's just best to don't do anything about it. That's the best way to handle things like this. Someone insults you, you ignore them, they realize it's not working, profit.

Even playing along with a racist remark is bad. It'd only encourage the racist to use it more often.

The word "mean mean black person" doesn't really concern me. They can call each other that all they want. Really, the word is used so much, that it has lost it's meaning.

Complaining about "Black people being racists" is ironically racism itself, honestly. It's almost like a invitation for them to insult us more for our skin color.

So yeah, oh no, they called us weak, life is over.

---