
Subject: Re: question to christians about jesus
Posted by Chimp on Fri, 01 Feb 2008 22:18:03 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Muad Dib15 wrote on Fri, 01 February 2008 15:16MWright967 wrote on Thu, 31 January 2008 22:41Sn1per74* wrote on Thu, 31 January 2008 18:48MWright967 wrote on Thu, 31 January 2008 17:59I see religion as nothing more than:

- A. A tool used over the ages to control people.
- B. A safety net to make humans feel good about themselves.

I wish I could believe in an eternal nirvana....Sigh.
Why don't you? Why can't you believe that there is something greater than all of us out there? Go to church once and you'd be suprised at how the day you go, they talk about something that is happening in your life right then. It's amazing.

If you think about it, god creates all of us. God puts us through pain and suffering. Then god destroys us in a fiery maelstrom. I would never believe in or worship such a so called "loving" entity.

Another little fact I find interesting...It says in the bible that God creates man in his image, and essentially, programms each human uniquely to serve a purpose in his grand scheme. Which means when a robber kills an old lady for her purse, god made it so, to aid in his grand plan. Then that robber goes to hell fires. He predestines humans to be damned for eternity to blazing painful flames? So loving is he.

Think free will. He said that we can do what ever we want. Thats what people don't seem to understand. If we choose to kill someone, He can't do anything about it until we die.

Humans don't have free will. They were created in God's visage, and God knows and sees all. Therefore he sees the robber kill the lady before it ever happens, but does nothing to prevent it because its part of his grand plan. Not exactly my kind of god.
