Both teams sucked. Everything Manning threw was a lob that was hardly what one would consider a performance by a "Super Bowl" quarterback. Brady wasn't at his best, either, but he had a decent excuse in that his offensive line didn't know how to protect the pocket.

Then the officials wanted the Giants to win. They let a couple turnovers go unnoticed. They called the one Burrell fumble an incomplection, which wasn't the easiest of calls to make, but since it was ruled incomplete, the call couldn't have been challenged. The second turnover was correctly called a fumble, but the refs picked their asses and let the play continue for 10-20 seconds AFTER the Patriots lineman recovered the fumble and was down.

I'm not one of the types of people to bitch about the officiating because there were some arbitrary calls/miscalls that "decided" the game. These two turnovers could have been HUGE momentum boosts for the Patriots. Plus, more time in the Patriots' hands could have meant the game.

I'll give credit to the Giants, though. They deserved to be in the Super Bowl.
