HP is probably one of the better brands for business, regardless of the fact that it's not meant for gaming. Just take a HP server with service better than any selfbuild server you can think off.

First things you could try -

- Download the latest driver from the ATI website
- Reboot you pc in safe mode (f8) before the Windows logo shows.
- Remove it by Software
- Reboot
- Install the new VGA driver.

If this doesn't work, you could try the same steps all over but instead of step 3, add a step 4 go to <http://www.drivercleaner.net/> or a freeware program. This will remove all the old files that the driver has left. (Shouldn't be necessary) try the first steps first.
