Yes, I know but Blue makes it seem life is depressing without a religion.

Cabal8616 wrote on Sat, 08 March 2008 00:10The reason why I believe this is that it's a little too odd that people have always had these beliefs of hope and an afterlife. If there was no creator to give us these beliefs by their own word, where would humanity have gotten this idea?

Then in that case, it is most certainly NOT the Judeo-Christian "God" who "gave us these beliefs." The Judeo-Christian God is a jealous and bloodthirsty supernatural being who forbid the worship of other god or gods and threatened severe punishments for doing so:

Quote:3 Thou shalt have no other gods before me.

4 Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth.

5 Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me;

Exodus 20:3-4

It is absurd to suggest that this "God" ^ is the one who put these beliefs into us. I find it irrational and simply stupid and contradictory that the "God" who supposedly said these things took the longest route through history in his "plan" to reach the people...a plan that had thousands of generations of human beings worshipping the Sun, lightening, thunder and many other natural occurences and other gods. It's too simple to see where religion came from.

As for the emotions, even animals have emotions. They have their own forms of courting and mating just as humans have.

Even the argument of intelligent design has it's severe flaws. Who made such a complex being like "God" who then proceeded on to make seemingly "complex" things?

As for the whole memory and soul thing, please atleast understand what you are saying before saying it.

So you are saying that deep inside, I actually have the memory of me sucking milk from a tit-shaped bottle? I don't think so.

It is OLD Science news that in babies, the brain is simply too young to have these functions. The hippocampus, cerebral cortex, and the frontal cortex are simply not mature enough to glean, process, and retain memory and therefore no conscience exists. It is gained as the brain matures over the years and dies when the brain stops to function.
