
Subject: Does CaptKurt ever give up, honestly?
Posted by Aircraftkiller on Fri, 18 Jul 2003 20:44:42 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

xpontiusIf you cant see that your apparantly putting down a rather large amount of mods that you arent associated with and stamping them with your opinion of disapproval, you might want to read definition again. O and i actually took the time to look at synonyms in an actual dictionary, get an actual definition and actually link that definition to how you behave with modders here.

Quote:If you had actually read the definition, you're saying that you know me well enough to understand that I value everything in reference to my own interests in life. You know damn well i dont know u beyond your posts and online play ,what else would i be referencing to....mm maybe your opinion to others?

So this means you have some kind of ability to label me with a dictionary definition you probably knew nothing about beforehand?

Using your logic, you're a nosy little child who thinks he is playing "The righteous knight who fights all evil" against me, employing your dictionary to lead yourself onto a battlefield of knowledge.

I don't have to like anything that isn't mine, not in this community and not in any other. I don't tolerate half-assed work, nor do I tolerate people hawking their half-assed goods. If you do good, I comment and help. If you don't, I refuse to credit you for anything but the garbage you're making. You don't like it? Tough shit, I tell it like it is - you tell it how it might be. Furthermore, if you're using that archaic definition against me, you need to remember that it would have to apply to everything in my life - it doesn't, henceforth it's nothing more than your pathetic try at trying to label others without adequate knowledge of the situations that have to do with the person you're labeling.

In other words; nice try, kid.
