Subject: Re: windows media player
Posted by Doitle on Sun, 23 Mar 2008 04:25:23 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

This may not be a very good solution for you but this is what I do. I have an Ipod and I just run it into the line in jack on my sound card. It does not tax the computer at all and allows for very quick control of your listening. Don't feel like this song? Nuts to it! Just pick up the ipod and change it. Much better than alt tabbing and changing the song. In your case it would allow you to quickly mute for beacon hunting, then crank that thing right back up.

You will be amazed at the performance inrease you gain. At least I was :/ I don't even have a crappy computer I have a pretty nice one. Still.

Also note: Definately will work with any Mp3 player I was just saying iPod because that's what I have.

Note the 2nd: Before someone is all applefag I have a Creative Zen too... The iPod is just better :/. I'm not very happy about it either but what can you do.