Just because they are the server owner(s) does not mean they are obliged to follow the rules they have created. Their position of power gives them a perfect niche for them to do whatever they feel like doing without getting suspected.

There are many times I have encountered such server owners throughout my Renegade days. And the solution is for you to just turn around and walk out. No use arguing about it...it is their server and there really is no way to "bring em to justice."

There are several strong communities out there for you to break into. I understand how it feels to be banned from a server you are used to playing in but that is reality.

Good news is there are a lot of good servers (where your skills will be appreciated) and lots of new friends for you to make. So don't take this loss too hard.

I'm not a complete nationalist, so I'm not going to claim you should have near-perfect grammar and composition skills before you enter the country, but it might be a good idea to mention English being a second language.

Like what does that have to do with the topic? Unless you haven't noticed, this is RENEGADEforums. And his English, though shrewn with errors, was quite understandable nevertheless.
