
Subject: Re: Dole

Posted by mrpirate on Tue, 27 May 2008 21:58:42 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

trooprm02 wrote on Sat, 24 May 2008 19:06Ryu wrote on Sat, 24 May 2008 14:27trooprm02 wrote on Fri, 23 May 2008 20:33Look at this ugly, poor piece of shit, and your rebuttal is a spelling mistake? Imfaoo, pretty good!

but you still live with your parents so.. who's dignity is at stake?

the plot thickens.

Im 17, not 25 like cheesesoda or w/e, And I already got my own home, moving in August 25th of this year (when I get back from my EU trip this summer). Its in the burbs, single 2 story home, valued at over $255,000 US. I got accepted to law school (ottawau, criminology, 4 year honors degree) with a scholarship, so I think Spoonys assumption is a dangerous one to make.

Best of luck in Criminology, but it might be useful to figure out what law school is before you start telling people you attend it.

Also, please stop bragging about things your parents have bought you. My parents have money too; one of the things that you will hopefully figure out at school is that no one gives a shit how rich daddy is, and going on about it makes you seem like a giant fag.

Finally, since you weren't satisfied with my response of "collage," let me say this:

- I am not poor.
- Yeah I lived in a shithole. The student ghetto at Queen's University is extremely run down. This is not my personal problem; anyway, it means that you can fuck around and not worry about damaging the beautiful house mommy and daddy bought.
- I am no longer a student as I've just graduated.
- Oh no, you said I'm ugly

Enjoy Ottawa U. With any luck you'll grow up a bit.

EDIT: As far as tuition is concerned, at Queen's my tuition was about $8000 this year, but I was in Engineering. I think tuition for an art sci student was more like $4500.