And Red Alert III has it's beta over the summer thru September to select players. Both games will be out and enjoyed by millions by this time next year; though it seems both games will be released late this year itself.

Personally, I can't wait to play StarCraft II. I am a new convert to StarCraft having picked up the original game/expansion a month ago. I am at the last Terran mission to take out the Ion cannon. So far no success with 2 failed attempts and the Renegade addiction doesn't help things either but yeah, StarCraft is pretty slick. I am enjoying it.

I am kinda allergic to 3D RTS games so I am hoping all turns out fine with these 2 new upcoming titles.

Here is gameplay video for StarCraft II:

The water textures in RA3 looks fantastic! You can see the sea floor as well as the wrecked ships.

But long way to go still!

EDIT: I am all excited for StarCraft II though can't wait to come play RA III with those furious hot Soviet gunships!

EDIT 2: Typo fix.

Good gravy starbuzz, you should define what an RTS is, for thoes of us that don't know.

There's something called google you know...
