If you're really a hardcore gamer, you will notice the difference between a $10 and a $50 mouse. There will come times when you're like, "Damn I'm glad I had that extra button."

From my experience, LOGITECH PWNS ALL. My old desktop has a Logitech MX510, the older brother of the 518 you've got linked up there. Very nice mouse. Currently, I'm using a VX Revolution (MX Rev's smaller cousin). I love the free rolling scroll and all the buttons. (Course the wheel would still work well if I hadn't dropped it so many times.) The right-handed styling is also a nice plus, very comfortable to use.

The next mouse I get will most likely be another Logitech, either the G5 or G9 (depending on how much I'm willing to spend).

Although, this mouse would be THE SHIT.
