The B-bodies are a great ride, and great to cruise around in. They're also big suckers with a 5.7L V8, and are coveted for that reason. Because they are a body on frame vehicle, they ain't the best handling, but they are comfy, especially in their Buick, and Cadillac forms.

Of course, I'd go for the '05+ models simply because I'd want something a little more efficient. I've driven that vehicle in its Pontiac variant, and it's fun, especially with the supercharger whine. Only thing is, people seem to have problems with the supercharged 3.8... usually because the morons don't realize that superchargers need to have their oil changed too.
