Sure, everyone has free healthcare, but its useless with 50 people lining the doors for an operation. The Canadian healthcare system is a perfect example of what Europe is going through as well.

ugh, Dunno were you're getting your facts from but the problem is that because Britain is on a anti-smoking campaign, the tax from cigarettes goes towards the NHS (National Healthcare System) and 40,000 people have quit smoking, That means alot of tax isn't going towards the NHS meaning no funds.

That's it.

Our health care system is fine - My mother has been treated for Cancer, surgery, Chemotherapy, the works and is now fine.

I've had a operation on my foot to get rust from a nail out of my foot, If I didn't get that operation I'd be dead now due to blood poisoning.

Both operations and treatment was free.

But we're both alive and kicking - Our health care system is fine - America's is in question, though.
