I was new to HTML at one point, too, but that didn't mean I should make sites with colors that absolutely CLASH. Plus, linking to pages that don't exist? Come on, that's a fucking no-brainer. It'd be one thing if he was like, "hey, I'm making this site, tell me what you think of it." Instead, he mentions it's a new fan site, and usually when you make those announcements, it's that the site is finished. I certainly have no desire to release my newest portfolio design and expect people to try to use it. It's nowhere near working condition, and I use logic to know that I shouldn't release it.
