most problems are the user's fault. It could be down to pure stupidity, or blaming the comp is slow because you havn't waited just a moment for the startup programs to load.

I like windows because I'm used to it and because of it's humungous software/hardware base.

I can also vouch for linux too, I have the latest ubuntu disc to my left. However I don't really see the point in having it installed when i can do everything in windows.
