I still fail to see why it has to be mandatory, if a server owner wants to keep the game how it is, let them do so. If that then raises the question of servers being calculated different as regards to the main ladder, then add a stipulation that non-points fix servers will not count towards the ladder.

We will run the points fix on certain server/servers, however not on others. I support the "fix" in the right environment, and will continue to do so as I've done since the day it went beta. However if this is merely pushed down our throats, and we're told we have no choice, and to like it or lump it, I'm going to be far less supportive.
