

---

Subject: Re: Ban Heavyx101?

Posted by cheesesoda on Mon, 28 Jul 2008 12:24:36 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

R315r4z0r wrote on Mon, 28 July 2008 01:28 But he has been given the chance to redeem himself 3 times already, and every time he just sinks back into the hole he started from.

When he gets in that hole, he starts acting all pessimistic.. saying everyone hates him and no one is nice to him. He then tries to get respect that way, then when enough people say "it's ok" blah blah, then he starts disrespecting other members.

Your smoking example is completely irrelevant. Someone trying to quit smoking is doing something for their own gain, whether you criticize them for doing it or not, it doesn't effect anyone else. Unlike him, who has cheated on many different occasions, been banned from dozens of servers, confesses, then is given a second chance only to get caught cheating again! And then when he is given the BOTD again, he betrays his trust again and proves that he still owns cheats and can use them by cheating on Reborn and basically handing them out to other people.

In stead of your example of criticizing someone trying to quit smoking, it should be if you would criticize a 2 time murderer for trying to come clean after lying about not killing anyone anymore.

But like I said, the forums are a different entity entirely, that's why he shouldn't be banned.

Also, @ Ryu. I find it funny how you said "Grow up" and "Ignore him" in the same sentence. :\ I wasn't talking about giving him second chances on servers. I'm talking about these forums. That's what this thread is about, and that's all I'm taking into consideration.

It's as Goz said, he hasn't broken any forum rules, but he has been warned.

Oh, and enough with these "Ban <insert name>" threads. Do they ever work? No, so what's the fucking point? You'd think people would get a fucking clue and realize that nothing ever comes from them. This type of thread is more annoying than anything.

---