This new rule seems to have spread around a bit. Don't ever remember seeing it on any servers I played before. Gosh I miss the old HT server that used to be full all the time and great mods there.

PS. To some that say rules are rules, I don't have an issue about that but I didn't even know about this rule....and the mod didn't even say it was against the rules, just seemed hormonally imbalanced and on a anger rampage or something. I guess players now are expected to first find and go the the servers web page before they can play or they might be kicked for ingame mechanics that have been there from the very start.

It's really a shame.

He didn't immediatly kick you. You questioned his authority, and then you were kicked. Could he have been a little more understanding/patient? Sure, but rules are rules.
