Not to be a total asshole, but before calling someone an idiot, make sure your spelling is correct first.

I don't think Obama is an idiot at all. In fact, he's very clever, as he has can change positions constantly, and get away with it, whereas any other candidate would be lambasted, and therein lies my problem.

However, Obama's sheen is wearing it seems, and people are starting to take a harder look at the guy.

My problem with McCain is that he could end up veering too far to the right, meaning he'll have to embrace the people that support the current administration... and I know McCain cringes at the thought of that, but he may have to go through with it, and keep grinning. Heading to the right will then alienate independent voters, and send them to Obama.
