I have always found it interesting that the same people who treat others badly on any given day will complain, whine, and otherwise raise hell over someone doing something just a bit worse than what they've done.

For example, the overly sarcastic guy who always ends his vitriolic posts with a complains to the heavens above that someone used cancer as a way to garner sympathy, as if he even knew what sympathy was or how to display it.

I think the problem is that everyone is capable of things that Bluesummers did, and showing people that they aren't a shining beacon of purity makes them start showing how cruel they can be without needing to use cancer as a cover.
