Oh, so you're the supreme authority on the constitution? You know exactly what it does and does not allow, cut and dry?

The constitution is a document that must be interpreted, seeing as how we can't resurrect the founding fathers from their graves and ask them directly. Just because one person's interpretation of the document doesn't match yours doesn't make him or her wrong.

By the way, it would be nice to see an example of his voting record not "following what the constitution allows," instead of just reading an unreferenced accusation.
