You act as if I haven't had anybody I know die. Not that it's important, and I'm not saying this to gain sympathy, but my grandma died unexpectedly yesterday. Did I start blaming someone? Not really. I mean, my grandma had been given a new med the other night that made her sick, and I got angry that it could have been the meds. However, once I found out the C.O.D., I wasn't blaming anybody or anything.

I did yell at God for not existing, though, but that's been a personal struggle for me for the past few months, anyway.
