

---

Subject: Re: Vice-Presidential Debate

Posted by Ethenal on Sun, 05 Oct 2008 03:58:49 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Quackpunk wrote on Sat, 04 October 2008 18:45Ethenal wrote on Sat, 04 October 2008

14:37pawkyfox wrote on Sat, 04 October 2008 14:28Ethenal wrote on Fri, 03 October 2008

17:17How many of you watched it? If so, what did you think?

Personally, I think Sarah Palin seemed a bit phony in her attempts to seem "down-home" and when she winked at the camera, just plain creepy. I also found it interesting that she was openly refusing to answer the questions the moderator presented to her; she seemed to be obsessed with talking about her energy policies in the "huge state" of Alaska more than anything. Another thing that stood out to me was Biden's statement that we have spent more money on Iraq in three weeks than we have in our entire campaign in Afghanistan. To me, it just seems wrong that we have spent more on a seemingly unprovoked war than we have in the war against a group that attacked our citizens on our own soil.

I felt the same way.

EDIT:

This maybe fun to add:

LOL

I don't find that very accurate or funny, but who can blame you guys, the media is giving her a very bad rap.

I thought it was fairly accurate having watched the debate... everything she said basically seemed recited from a prepared set of notes... also, I haven't really read/watched anything about her since the debate, so the media has nothing to do with it.

---