
Subject: Re: Now that Tiberium is canceled...

Posted by Goztow on Tue, 07 Oct 2008 06:32:29 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

[NEFobby[GEN] wrote on Tue, 07 October 2008 02:47] Small maps is what kept the tight gameplay, though. A lot of custom maps played in new maps servers are really huge and that results in slower gameplay. Take Last_Stand for an example, that map can't really be played unless you've got at least twenty people in the server; and even when you do it's still a lot slower than a 10v10 in a map like Field or Islands.

Big fanmaps aren't worth playing: noone likes to have to run for 2 minutes before meeting someone, get a 10 second fight, then get killed and run for 2 minutes again. The few popular fanmaps, like snow, bunkersTS and Siege are all rather small and action filled.
