No. Tiberian Dawn takes place in the present, around 2000. Red Alert took place shortly after WW2 (Between the late 40's and 50's). That has more to do with Red Alert being on the same engine as TD, and the developers not wanting to spend extra time on coming up with new units to replace everything.

That doesn't make any sense, RA1 couldn't've taken place in the 50s, In RA1 there was jet aircraft, nuclear weapons, helicopters, And if WW2 never happened, that would've only slowed down advancements in technology, so RA1 would take place somewhere between the late 50s and early 70s

RA2 doesn't even fit into the storyline, It was made by what would become EAP, not Westwood.

WW2 did happen in Red Alert. Red Alert was WW2, the only thing that was stopped (by Einstein going back in time) was Hitler's involvement.

In WW2 there were jet aircraft. Late in WW2 the Germans introduced jet aircraft, such as the the Me-262. (Since Nazi Germany wouldn't have been involved, their jet planes would have probably came later. But we all know that war creates advancements in technology, so it is feasible that the Soviet Union could have developed jet technology.)

If you'll remember, WW2 was ended with two atomic weapons.

And, there were helicopters that were used in WW2, made by Sikorsky.

The only thing you're proving is your lack of knowledge of WW2.
